

Native Plant Nurseries

Purchasing Native Plants

Native plants are gaining widespread popularity because of their natural beauty and their ability to withstand most of our region's challenging weather conditions: record-setting drought, hot summer temperatures, and soggy, cool weather soils. In response, many more garden centers and nurseries are expanding their selections of native plants; even home improvement centers have started offering some of the most popular native species. You can now find almost any native plant you want by shopping at local garden centers, ordering by catalog from specialty nurseries, or purchasing online from growers across the country.

Important note: Only deal with reputable nurseries and growers, and never collect plants from the wild or purchase wild collected plants. Wild-collection threatens the existence of native species and ecosystems, and if collected from far away, will result in plants which have a reduced likelihood of surviving in your garden. The following is a partial list of some of the better known native plant nurseries in our area. If you know of additional nurseries, please send an email to mberres@ghi.coop so that we can add them to our expanding list.
